Frommers is no doubt one of the most popular travel book publishers. They maintain that sterling reputation with me in this great pocket travel guide on Barcelona Spain. I studied this book in the days prior to traveling from the USA to Barcelona, but we really hit our stride when we hit the ground in Barcelona with the inevitable question...Where do we eat??? Frommers to the rescue by dividing the city into easy to navigate districts. We figured out where we were (at our hotel) and looked at which district was within walking distance. We followed the guides recommendation to see La Boqueria which was an AMAZING farmers market, which had small open air cafes dotting the perimeter. These little cafes by virtue to being in the market simply grabbed whatever was absolutely fresh that day and cooked it for eager diners!! We jumped from stand to stand, and without realizing it, did a famous event called a Tapas Crawl. We then followed the book further and toured the works of famed artist Antoni Gaudi (As in the term - GAUDY). The chapel La Sagrada Familia (also referred to as the Melting Candles Church) is truly one of the great wonders of the world, as well as an artistic marvel!! Navigation of the city was made easy peasy lemon squeezy with the recommendation of catching the double decker tourist bus. It is inexpensive, and includes earphones that pipe in narration in your choice of a half a dozen languages to suit your needs. We had a blast at a 100+ year old restaurant (Los Caracoles) that specializes in stewed snails, and roasted sucking pig all cooked over an open wood burning stove. If you're going to Barcelona - buy this book!! If you're not going, but you have an interest in Spain...Buy this book!!

Many of the martial art topics covered were some that I had always been curious about. I did find the translation from 'virtue' to 'cool' mildly irritating; I kept getting distracted by the talk about 'coolness' all the time; I think virtue would have done just as well.
